The Moon of Roses.

Wondrous moon of roses.
Moon of roses red—
Watch over my lady
Till night has fled.
Tender moon of roses—
Moon of roses red—
Glean on her purely
With thy pale light.

Lovely moon of roses—
Moon of roses red—
Guide her through dreamland,
Guard thou her bed.

Blessed moon of roses—
Moon of roses white—
Whisper, "I love her,"
All through the night.
—Annie P. L. Field, in June Century.

At the Art Exhibit.

Nothing could have been more inviting or prettier than the rooms of the art exhibit of the Richmond Club were last evening. Mrs. Allison Hodges, assisted by Mrs. Thomas Cary Johnson, Mrs. P. M. Fry, Mrs. Ernest Smallman, Mrs. Thomas D. Scott, Mrs. Edmund Stradwick and Miss Laura Bacon, welcomed visitors to the exhibit who attended in large numbers.

Groups gathered here and there about different pictures, discussing points of value and artistic characteristics shown in their composition and technique. "The New Acquaintance," by William R. Leigh, that hangs in the hall and answers to 54, in the catalogue, was a canvas that received much complimentary mention.

In the room where the water color paintings are displayed a landscape by Miss Adelle Williams was considered one of the best catalogued. A portrait called "Lettitia," by Louis Loeb, hung above the mantel in this room caught the eye of all comers.

A painting of "Rhododendron," by Ben Foster, done in oil, was much noticed. So was "An Interesting Book," by John W. Alexander, thought to be one of the finest pieces of work shown.

"The Interior of Lincoln Cathedral," by Collin Campbell Cooper, had a group in front of it almost the entire evening. Mr. Campbell, as an American artist, has justly come to be considered as a fine exponent of architectural beauty in Cathedral interiors. In a different line, his paintings of "The Ferries, New York," and "Randolph Street, Chicago," show what artistic effort can attain in the portrayal of skyscrapers when the effects produced by light, color and water colors are properly estimated.

The pleasure of Wednesday evening was enhanced by several violin numbers from Mr. Robert Phifer with Miss Myrtle Redford as accompanist. Mrs. George Warren sang beautifully more than once, when Mrs. George Whitfield was at the piano. Miss Kate Puller, at Dr. Allison Hodges's request, enlarged the programme by several attractive recitations.

A center of interest Wednesday evening was the hall where the work of the Richmond Art School in oil, black and white work, watercolor and water colors, was hung. The strength, merit and beauty of this work, individually and collectively, shows what a high standard has been established and is being held by the school under the supervision of Miss Harriett Lee Talliferro.

Goes to Washington.

Miss Talliferro, who will probably go to Washington, D. C., today to attend to orders for four portraits which she has undertaken there, will shortly return to Richmond to work on three others that she is to do here.

Her summer vacation, therefore, will make her alternate Wednesday afternoon, the national capital and of Richmond. Should she be able to spare the time, Miss Talliferro hopes to go to Gloucester, where she spent the years of her early life, and where she has many relatives and friends.

Ario Bates' Story.

A feature of the June Century Magazine is a story by Ario Bates, entitled "In the Virginia Room."

Visitors to the Confederate Museum and to the room where the case stands holding the coat of General Robert E. Lee, read to by Ario Bates, will readily recognize the environment of the sketch. As to whether it is founded upon fact or fancy must be left to the reader's imagination.

The most important point in it to Southern people is the attitude of the author and of the sympathy and understanding he displays when he makes his hero say:

"I am a Northern man, and I believe with my whole soul that the North was right. I believe in the cause for which my father died. Only I see now that if he had lived in the South, the same spirit would have carried him into the Confederate army."

The June Century is, in one sense, indeed, a Southern number, for it contains "A Pupil's Recollections of Stonewall Jackson," written by Thomas M. Semmes, and Gouverneur Morris has contributed to its pages a tender little Virginia idyl, which he calls "Miss Sally and the Enemy."

Sponsor and Maids.

Division Inspector Hunter Boyd Gold, of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, has appointed Miss Louise Jones, daughter of Mr. Thomas Jones, of Newport News, as sponsor to the Louisville, Kentucky, Confederate Reunion. Miss Mary M. Stuart, daughter of Captain J. B. Stuart, and granddaughter of the Confederate cavalry leader, General J. E. B. Stuart, will be Miss Jones's maid of honor.

Miss Eulie M. Langhorne, of Lynchburg, Va., has notified Commander A. H. Jennings, of the First Brigade of the Virginia Division, Sons of Confederate Veterans, that she would accept the appointment and make of honor for the division at the coming reunion to be held at Louisville. Miss Langhorne is the daughter of the late Wistar Langhorne and a granddaughter of Colonel Maurice S. Langhorne, a Confederate commander of the Garand-Rodas Camp.

Annual Club Meeting.

The Kate Wheelock Whist Club held its annual meeting Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. D. T. Williams was re-elected president; Mrs. J. Willard Craig, vice-president, and Mrs. Boykin, secretary and treasurer.

The Lawyer's Invocation to Spring.

By HENRY HOWARD BROWNELL.

Henry Howard Brownell was born in Providence, R. I., February 6, 1820. He died at Hartford, Conn., in 1872. He was a graduate of Trinity College, Hartford. He was admitted to the bar, practiced five years, was acting ensign on board Farragut's flagship, the Hartford, and saw the battle of Mobile Bay.

WHEREAS, on certain boughs and sprays,
Now divers birds are heard to sing,
And sundry flowers their heads upraise,
Hail to the coming on of spring!

The songs of those said birds arouse
The memory of our youthful hours,
As green as those said sprays and boughs,
As fresh and sweet as those said flowers.

The birds aforesaid,—happy pairs,—
Love, mid the aforesaid boughs, inshrine
In frechold nests; themselves, their heirs,
Administrators and assigns.

O, busiest term of Cupid's Court,
Where tender plaintiffs actions bring,—
Season of frolic and of sport,
Hail, as aforesaid, coming Spring!

FASHION HINTS

MISSSES' SEVEN GORED PLAITED SKIRT.

No. 3135—Gored skirts that are almost plain at hips and waist and fall into full ripples and folds at the hem are as fashionable for misses as for adults.

The design illustrated promises to become very popular, especially for making up in the new lustrous mohairs, either checked or plain. It has a large box-pleat at center front, with deep backward turning plaits overlapping each seam, and forming an inverted plait at center back.

A good effect is given by stitching the plaits to yoke depth, or midway to the knees and letting them fall free below.

It is an easy skirt to put together, very simply made, yet very dressy in appearance. The model is suitable for taffeta, foulard, cashmere, serge, plique, linen or mercerized suitings.

The pattern is cut in sizes 12, 14 and 16 years and requires 4 yards of 36-inch material for the 14-year size.
